

Recycling and Economic Development Specialist

The Waste to Wealth Initiative of the Institute for Local Self-Reliance is looking to fill a full time, associate-level position. The job involves developing recycling, composting and reuse enterprises throughout the US.

The associate will be responsible for assisting local governments, small businesses and community develop organizations develop viable value added enterprises and policies that nurture such enterprises. The job involves being responsible for representing ILSR's Waste to Wealth Initiative within regional, national and international networks.

The associate should have at least three years experience in developing value added businesses in the waste sector.

The associate should be familiar with many of the key contemporary concepts and issues; incineration, Extended Producer Responsibility, one-bin systems, minimum content legislation and RCRA.

The associate should have excellent research and writing skills as well as excellent public speaking skills. The associate should also be sociable and have a background working with communities. Experience in creating webinars and using social media is a plus.

The associate should be familiar with the concept of local self-reliance as promoted by ILSR. www.ilsr.org

Start Date: July 1, 2015

Job Site: DuPont Circle, Washington, DC

Salary: Commensurate with experience

Full Benefits: 401 K matching, family health and dental insurance, sick leave, maternity and paternity leave, vacation.

Send cover letter, resume and writing sample to:

Neil Seldman

1710 CONNECTICUT AVENUE, NW

WASHINGTON, DC 20009

or

nseldman@ilsr.org